12. Summary of Rule's Economic and Fiscal Impact on Specific Businesses, Business Sectors, Public Utility Rate Payers, Local Governmental Units and the State's Economy as a Whole (Include Implementation and Compliance Costs Expected to be Incurred)

We expect this rule change to have minimal impact on the business sector. The rule changes impact the establishment of child support orders in family and paternity actions.

13. Benefits of Implementing the Rule and Alternative(s) to Implementing the Rule

ADMINISTRATIVE RULES Fiscal Estimate & Economic Impact Analysis

Periodic review of Wisconsin's child support guidelines insures that the financial support parents pay accurately reflects the cost of raising children in this state.

14. Long Range Implications of Implementing the Rule

15. Compare With Approaches Being Used by Federal Government

Wisconsin's Percentage of Income Standard was created to comply with federal requirements in 45 CFR 302.56 (a) that require that as a condition of approval of its State plan, all states must establish one set of guidelines by law or by judicial or administrative action for setting and modifying child support award amounts within the State. The methodology to be used in calculating support orders is at state discretion.

45 CFR 302.56 (e) also requires states to review, and revise, if appropriate, the guidelines established under paragraph (a) of this section at least once every four years to ensure that their application results in the determination of appropriate child support award amounts.

16. Compare With Approaches Being Used by Neighboring States (Illinois, Iowa, Michigan and Minnesota)

All states are required to adopt child support guidelines. Wisconsin contracts with the Institute for Research on Poverty to conduct research on the various guidelines models used by other states and the application of those models in special circumstances including high and low income families, cases in which parents have obligations to children in more than one family, and shared and split placement arrangements. Wisconsin regularly reviews this research as a part of its guidelines review. We have reviewed the child support guidelines used by Illinois, Iowa, Michigan and Minnesota and determined that the amount of support under Wisconsin's guidelines is consistent with the approaches used in these states.
